

SportsArt fit the bill at Nottingham Police Sports & Social Club

It should not be surprising that physical fitness and regular exercise is supported and encouraged throughout the police force and many other public service sectors, as this has been proven to reduce the possibility of on-duty injuries, related illnesses and improve well-being and long-term health.

As a result, there are many sporting and leisure activities promoted by regional forces such as the Nottinghamshire Police Sports and Social Club (NPS&SC), which recently awarded SportsArt Fitness (UK) the contract to update fitness and training equipment in its ten gymnasiums across the county.

Sports and Social Club Executive - David Wilson of the NPS&SC reported, "The gyms were looking a little tired and there was a need to update the equipment to improve the facilities available and motivate members to maintain fitness.

After reviewing possible suppliers, we decided to ask Sports Art Fitness to quote us for a range of new equipment to support cardio vascular exercise that is an invaluable part of a complete fitness workout, plus strength equipment for toning and firming up the body.

This was a wise decision because from the initial contact to the development of the project, final delivery and after sales we have been provided with an excellent service. A special thank you, to Andrew Gange. I usually break into a sweat when I walk past a gym so Andrew's advice and knowledge was very much appreciated.

We now have fully equipped gymnasiums with plans to expand our facilities next year. The equipment came with a full manufacturers warranty and SportsArt Fitness has also been able to offer a service and maintenance contract that will keep our equipment in tip top condition and safe for use.

We would not hesitate in recommending SportsArt Fitness to anyone."
